AFFINITY CARD INSIGHT

We don't get wrapped up in just any idea. But when the Bank of Montreal proposed a special wrapper on Surgite! to launch the Brock University affinity card, we were pleased to agree.

Besides displaying a colour aerial shot of the campus, the affinity card offers mutual benefits to you and your alma mater. The first year fee of $10 is waived and the interest rate is at one percent below the usual rate for MasterCard holders. And don't forget that by paying your statement by the due date each month you will pay no interest charges at all. Other benefits are outlined on the wrapper.

In addition to the excellent cardholder benefits, Brock University will receive a percentage of all purchases made on your affinity card. Of this amount, 75 percent goes to the University endowment fund which provides scholarships for students, and the other 25 percent is allocated to the alumni association. We anticipate in five years, Brock affinity card users will help bring $150,000 much-needed revenue to the University.

This card is available to all Canadian-based alumni, staff, faculty, students and to anyone wishing to have Brock affinity card benefits. We are proud to offer it; we feel you will be proud to use it. May the affinity card also encourage you to stay involved with University activities.

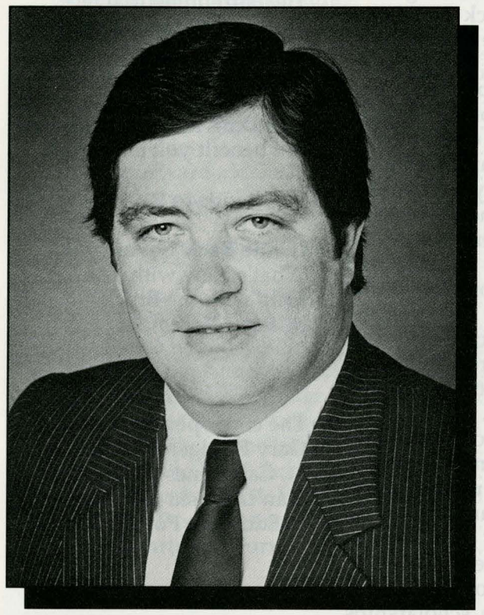
Burgoyne Centre for ENTREPRENEURSHIP



Henry Burgoyne

$500,000 TO CENTRE FOR ENTREPRENEURSHIP

Brock's newly-established Centre for Entrepreneurship received $500,000 from a St. Catharines family exceedingly familiar with the entrepreneurial spirit. Henry Burgoyne, president and publisher of The St. Catharines Standard Ltd., made the donation last winter on behalf of his family and The Standard's 1991 Centennial.

Brock's Burgoyne Centre for Entrepreneurship is part of the School of Administrative Studies and Prof. Ken Loucks (BA, MBA, PhD) serves as its director. It undertakes applied research for improvement of existing owner-managed businesses and provides entrepreneurship training for those who want to start new businesses. The Centre for Entrepreneurship also provides entrepreneurship courses for Brock and high school students. The Centre will be housed in the Taro School of Business (scheduled move-in date, January '91).

NEW STUDENT CENTRE IN THE WORKS

Brock students will soon have a place to call their own with the building this summer of a new Student Centre. Scheduled to open in the fall of '90, the Centre will house a 400-seat pub, a food court, student lounge, The Press student newspaper, and other services as well.

A contract between the University and the Students' Union (BUSU) sets up an independent corporation to manage the Centre while the University retains ownership of the building itself. Construction costs for the Centre are being paid by a self-imposed student levy of $10 per course which began in Sept. '89. The University is donating the architects' fees for the Student Centre which will be placed to the south of Thistle East. The Alumni Association Board of Directors has approved a two-year $200,000 alumni campaign to begin in November '89 to help fund the Student Centre.

WHEELER MEETS MALAYSIAN CHAPTER

College of Education Professor Alan Wheeler has taken advantage of an overseas consulting assignment to become acquainted with Brock's Malaysian Alumni Chapter.

Wheeler writes that he lives close to Chapter President Dick Yeap and has hosted an alumni reunion at his home. Wheeler says he finds the Malaysian alumni have strong, positive attitudes about their time in St. Catharines and in Canada. They were especially interested to hear of development plans at Brock including the new Taro School of Business and goings on with BUSU.

STAFF & FACULTY CARE TOO!

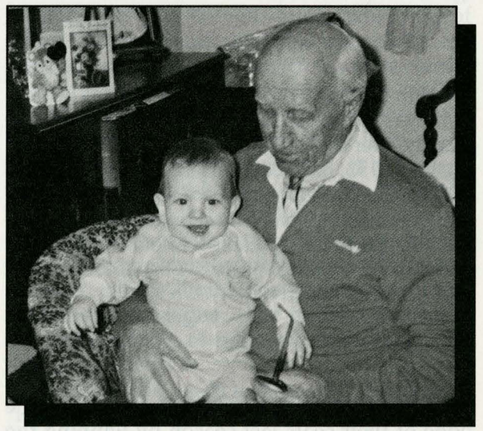
Brock's 676 staff & faculty have donated $273,457 to the 25th Anniversary Campaign which will help fund the Taro School of Business and the 25th Anniversary Scholarship Campaign. The campaign co-chairs were Uwe Brand, Wendy Hollinshead, Bill LaHorey, Howard Prout, and Jim Lennard.

ALUM PART OF MODERN-DAY MIRACLE

It's being called a modern day miracle. The stuff that feeds the popular press, and pop current affairs television. At the centre of the story is Brock grad Susan (née Cybulski) Hudder (BA, music '77) and her son, Jeffrey, whose call to his braindead grandfather pulled him to consciousness in front of an amazed Ottawa medical staff.

Surgite! caught up with Susan at her Appleton home (in the Ottawa Valley), one week after the birth of her baby, Melodie, and six months after the incident to ask for an inside account and to discover how the attention has changed her family's life. The last time her father, Harold, was on Brock campus he watched Susan graduate and thought Alphie's Pub was a fabulous place. Since that visit, 79-year-old Harold Cybulski's health had deteriorated. In Susan's words: "My father had an operation on his aneurism, then suffered a stroke and a heart attack. So he was at Ottawa Civic Hospital in really bad shape. Five specialists consulted with us and said he probably wouldn't regain consciousness. They said we should look for a chronic care institution.

I was worried he would die and I wanted my son (Jeffrey, 2) to see his grandfather one more time. He was in intensive care and children under 18 weren't allowed. But I persuaded the doctor and nurses to let Jeffrey in. We wheeled him into the hospital room in his stroller. He shouted 'Grandpa!' My father opened his eyes, looked right at him, and stretched out his arms. The nurse said to put Jeffrey on the bed. Then my dad touched him and kissed him, and within a week he was out of intensive care. No-one could believe it.



Miracle baby and grandfather

Today my parents are back at home at Barry's Bay, Ont. and my dad drives himself to his doctor's appointments and for groceries. This case is being written up in a medical journal, and has been reported on in 25 newspapers and television shows. He gets calls from all kinds of people who say he's given them hope. He's a very shy man but he says if he can help others he doesn't mind the attention. He says he doesn't remember anything after his operation until hearing the word 'Grandpa'."

DAVIS IS DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

Bob Davis, a professor of Physical Education, was named Director of Athletics last May, shortly after the resignation of Garney Henley.

Davis, 53, has been with Brock for 21 years, and has held the positions of Athletic Director and Chairman of the Department of Athletics. He will continue to teach while assuming the Director of Athletics duties. A basketball coach will be hired shortly.

VARSITY ROUND UP

The Badgers hockey team kept fans on the edge of their seats last season by winning the OUAA West Championship with Mike Pelino being named OUAA West Coach of the Year for the second consecutive season.

The women's basketball team won the OWIAA West championship, and the Brock Invitational. Coach Chris Critelli was later named assistant coach to the Canadian women's team in addition to her Brock duties.

The men's basketball team went winless in 14 league games. Richard Deschatelet's wrestlers won six medals at the OUAA wrestling championships while Herb DeBray's swimmers won seven medals including three gold (Kirsty Salmon and Baldev Ahluwahlia) at the OUAA/OWIAA championships. In CIAU competition, the women's team placed 10th and the men's placed 14th.

Athletes of the year were Bill Dowd BPhEd '89 of the hockey team and Kirsty Salmon of the swim team.

For a full report of varsity performance, contact Mike Pelino at 688-5550 or 688-5544 (non-touchtone phone) at ext. 3423.

HENDRY HEADS ROWING

Brock's new Rowing Coordinator is grad Dave Hendry (BA, '81, history), a former Brock oarsman, past captain of the St. Catharines Rowing Club, and veteran coach.

Hendry firmly believes his roster of coaches for fall '89 (Bill Dyck, Mike Purcer, Ken Wakulich, BPhEd '78) are "the best rowing coaches at Ontario universities." Calling Brock his rowing home, Hendry is aiming at lofty goals: winning CIAU championships, undertaking fundraising for equipment (Brock owns only one eight-oared shell), and training athletes for national teams. For more information about Brock rowing call Dave Hendry at (416) 646-4522 or 641-6853.

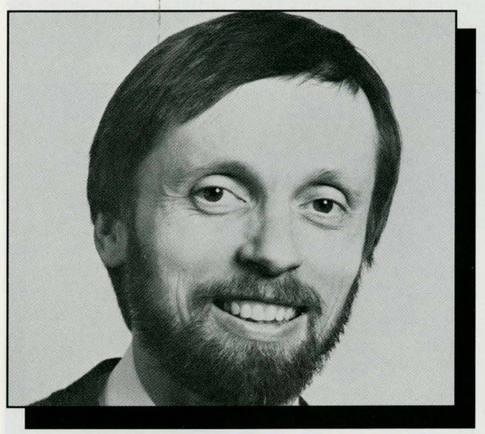
ENTREPRENEURS, ARE YOU FIT FOR RUNNING HOT?



Alex Stewart (MA, MBA, PhD, York), professor of Management and Marketing, talks about his new book, Team Entrepreneurship (Sage Publications Inc. 1989), derived from a conversation with Leila Lustig.

"Running Hot" is the pursuit of competitive advantage, with limited resources, through a collective learning process. The customer supplies the goal, the team supplies the system. Running Hot is custom-made for today's fast-moving global market, which constantly demands new skills and training to create new products.

Team Entrepreneurship is about Running Hot. It's not a how-to book for entrepreneurs, but rather a study of the kind of management that made Frank Stronach's Magna International the leading independent auto parts manufacturer in Canada, and also the nation's most successful entrepreneur. Magna identified a gap in the labour market: the auto makers themselves did not have the people to create new parts when they were needed; there were too many middle managers, too many "rules." Magna filled this gap by hiring entrepreneurial teams that could create their own systems for turning out auto parts quickly, in small lots, without fancy equipment or credentials. The two top executives of Magna are both former tool and die makers; neither has a PhD or an MBA.

The book came out of my doctoral dissertation. While working on a PhD in Management and Marketing at York University, I got a job on the shop floor at one of Magna's most successful divisions. The General Manager took me under his wing and saw to it that I worked in every department and function in the division. During those 10 weeks I furtively took notes on every scrap of paper I could find.

My conclusions are surprising. Current management theory assumes that any auto parts manufacturer will necessarily become as bureaucratic as its only customer—the auto industry. But the Magna division I observed was made up of independent entrepreneurial teams. It was Running Hot. And almost three years later, when I visited again, it was still Running Hot.

To the outsider, the way these teams work often seems chaotic; but in a way they're like a soccer team, where each player instinctively knows what the other will do in a given situation. The "players" on an entrepreneurial team don't start out with a set of rules, however; each member of the team is constantly learning, reaching past the known, comfortable way of doing things. Team members are not trained for their specific tasks; they train themselves.

At Magna, these people are the quality control managers, the schedulers, the inventory control people. They work long, hard hours under maximum stress. What keeps them Running Hot is the excitement and satisfaction of having successfully reached beyond themselves, the stimulation of learning all the time. The employee's "individual fulfilment" is never talked about, nor is the overall advancement of Magna. The immediate task is the absolute focus of everyone on the team. It's their whole world.

How do you get fit to Run Hot? There is no "Running Hot" personality, no "placement test." You serve your apprenticeship in the industry, acquire technical and operational knowledge. You learn management skills through role models and experience. You learn to know a business opportunity when you see one; and that's teachable.

Just how long can any firm Run Hot? The answer seems to hold little comfort for the individual: companies that Run Hot are usually decentralized into very small units that can be shut down when the market gap has closed. And what becomes of the team members? They simply take their new knowledge and find another place to keep learning. In fact, there's tremendous potential for upward mobility for successful Hot Runners. That's what keeps them Running.

GARY PRODGER

(BPhEd '77, BEd '78)
Owner, Eddy's Place (Lincoln Annex)
and Eddy's in Old Port

When you graduate into the recession, what's a physical education grad with a teaching degree to do? If you're Gary Prodger you open a restaurant, get sued the first year (because your mother didn't tell you "whistle dog" is a brand name), pay the bank back $1,000 a week when it recalls the loan, and buy drinks on the house anyway to keep some good humour about the whole thing.

"I was green as the grass," Prodger, now 33, says about opening Eddy's Place in the St. Catharines Lincoln Mall Annex. He was a varsity hockey player who worked summers at GM and noticed the demand for casual drinking places like Cat's Caboose. Because there were no teaching jobs, he put up his savings, plus a second mortgage on his mom's house, and obtained a $60,000 demand note from a local bank.

He named the bar/restaurant "Eddy's" after "Eddy Magumba", a fictitious character created in one of Prof. Bob Davis' classes. Prodger's philosophy has been to provide roadhouse-style food and drinks at inexpensive prices and treat his patrons in the most welcoming manner possible. Today the lean years are over. He has just opened a second restaurant in Port Dalhousie and is planning a third for Fonthill.

Still avid about Brock hockey, he treated the last season's varsity team to a free food-fest at the conclusion of its OUAA West championship season. The consumption: 52 pitchers of beer and 700 chicken wings.

Prodger plans to retire at 40. "I'll have put in a lifetime of work by then", he says. What will he do? "I wouldn't mind finally being able to teach." For now, good business sense is common sense. And the "whistle dog" goes by "Eddy's Dog."

ROBINA BERNARD

BA (Brock, '71 geography),
BEd (Lakehead), MEd (Wayne State)
President, Balloon Depot

Even when Robina Bernard was studying education, she had her nose in business books. So after teaching for a few years she took aim at a fourth degree—an MBA at the University of Western Ontario—but was rejected. Undaunted she latched on to the entrepreneurial spirit—cashed her pension fund, sold her furniture and went into the balloon business.

"I read an article about balloons and balloon decorating. I thought they were like smiles, I thought I would enjoy selling balloons," she said in an interview from her Mississauga-based business, Balloon Depot.

That was in '82. Today she decorates for clients throwing the plushest and largest parties, weddings and promotional events, and provides a "full-scale balloon business" including a self-serve balloon wholesale outlet, gift delivery, and decorating services. For the privilege of being company president, she works 70 to 80 hours a week, supervises seven full and part-time staff, goes to conventions, keeps one eye on current trends and another on her competitors.

LYNN MCGUIGAN

(BA, theatre '78)
President,
McGuigan Art Ventures

How to combine artistic integrity with the bottom line. That's Lynn McGuigan's biggest challenge—a challenge thrown to her daily by her clients and managed by a staff of three in The Beach area of Toronto.

Lynn McGuigan's management consulting firm specializes in arts and association management. "I saw a need for a business of this nature about five years ago," McGuigan says, "Many arts groups couldn't afford a full-time business manager but still needed management services." She had gained experience as Performing Arts Coordinator at Harbourfront and Director of Membership Services for the Toronto Theatre Alliance. On a part-time basis, out of her home with leased equipment, she began consulting. The upstart company is now a full-fledged business, with 60-80 hours logged by its President each week.

One of her clients is the Canadian Association of Women Executives and Entrepreneurs. "There's definitely the problem of the glass ceiling for women," McGuigan says, referring to the concept that women in organizations can see the top positions but not get promoted to them. "If women run into that, it's a real incentive to start their own business."

Only a decade ago, McGuigan would hardly have forecast her present role. She entered Brock to study choral music and theatre, and while a student began to enjoy the "behind the scenes" work of organizing plays. Now clients draw on her expertise in arts include the Harbourfront Corporation, the Dance Ontario Association, and the YWCA of Metropolitan Toronto.

Entrepreneurship suits her fine. "I like being the boss," she says. "I like being at the top of the chain of command."

JO-ANNE MCKENZIE

BA, (Brock, psychology/politics '73),
MBA (Windsor '75)
President,
Associated Child Care

Kids and care. The focus of her attention as a mother of three has become Jo-Anne McKenzie's business interest as well. With the birth of her last child, Jo-Anne left a management position to "try her hand as a full-time mom" and noticed the need for pre-and-post daycare services in Calgary. In one year, she had established three locations to provide care for 100 children, and turned a profit as well.

After working for larger companies (e.g. Procter and Gamble, PacificWest Publications) being an entrepreneur suits her lifestyle: "I'm in charge of my own destiny, and I'm too damned autocratic to jobshare." Supported emotionally by husband Ron Robart, a Petro-Can executive, the position allows her the flex time to care for Aaron, 10, Anne-Marie, 6, and Zak, 5.

But the business of daycare comes with added responsibility, Jo-Anne feels. "You can't deal with children at an arm's length. My greatest fear is to get too big too fast and detract from the quality of child care."

CHERYL HOLMAN

(BSc, geology '85)

EDWARD WALKER,

(BSc, geology '84; PhD candidate,Waterloo)
Holman-Walker Geologists Inc.

"There are a lot of risks. Mining is notorious for people who don't like to pay their bills," says Cheri Holman, about exploration in that field. So, she and husband Edward Walker have been shrewd in managing their incorporated partnership. For the past three years they have contracted their services to one company—Hudson's Bay Exploration and provided a service which has taken them to 55 miles north of Eskimo Point along the coast of Hudson's Bay.

They are responsible for planning and running exploratory excursions for 16 people, including arranging the tents, evaluating, drilling, staking, mapping and drilling the property.

This year they will put their business on hold as she (a former Brock oarswoman) works for Noranda and he (a former hockey player) finishes a PhD in experimental petrology at the University of Waterloo.

Going back to self-employment is a goal for both. "I think there will be a lot more flexibility down the road." Holman says.

LINDA (KUHNS) THORSLUND,

BRLS '87

CRAIG THORSLUND,

BPhEd '87
Owners,
Mexican Munchies

Linda and Craig Thorslund invite all Brock grads to stop in for Mexican refreshments. But it will require an excursion to the Dominican Republic to do so.

Located in downtown Puerta Plata is the Thorslund's entrepreneurial effort, Mexican Munchies. The local restaurant reviewer in The Puerto Plata News writes: "Mexican restaurants in Puerta Plata do not have a good record of success, but Craig and Linda Thorslund's new place may turn that around. The Thorslunds are young, Craig is 25 and Linda is 24, but you'd think they'd been making burritos and tacos for years, judging by the freshness, heartiness and refreshing spiciness of their food."

Prior to this effort, Linda had lived in the Carribean when her father, Robert Kuhns, was a business consultant there. She learned Spanish, found the climate allergy-free, and was keen to return after graduation from Brock. According to her St. Catharines-based father, a market survey showed positive readings for a Mexican take-out style restaurant. "They have a good life," Kuhns said upon return from a recent visit. "They work from 10:30 am until 5 pm then go to the beach. Their biggest business problem is finding suppliers."

CHARITABLE GIVING THROUGH LIFE INSURANCE

By Douglas G. Overy
(BA, psyc '75)

If I said that you could buy 100 dollar bills for pennies, how many would you ask for? As you lined up to get your share, would you consider giving some of them to Brock? There is a remarkable financial tool which allows one to do just that: it's called Life Insurance, and I've made it my career.

Life Insurance works on the simple but powerful concept of shared risk and because of this we can multiply many, many times over the cost of a life insurance policy and represent it as a very substantial death benefit.

How does this relate to Brock, the Alumni Association and the the 25th Anniversary? I'm glad you asked because this is the year we will make an effort to enlist some of the approximately 18,000 alumni into a program of charitable giving through life insurance.

For the University, this concept will provide a sizable bequest fund allowing for financial stability and planned development. For you it means an income tax credit today, and the knowledge it will not impinge upon your estate or your will.

It's not suggested that if you're making a regular or even a periodic contribution to Brock, that you discontinue this practice in favour of life insurance. But rather, for some of us who have just never gotten around to giving something back to Brock, perhaps this is the way to begin.

This is the way it works: if the annual premium on your "25th Anniversary Policy" is $1,000, you will receive a total (Ontario and Federal) income tax credit of $400.75. This, of course, means your out-of-pocket annual commitment is $600. That would provide a bequest of between $25,000 and $50,000, for policyholders between the ages of 25 and 50.

Please contact an insurance agent of your choice to see how you may make a bequest of life insurance to Brock University. Or you may wish to contact the Alumni Office directly at 688-5550, ext. 3564 for further details.

Doug Overy is a sales associate with the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company in its Hamilton office. He also contributes a weekly column on life insurance matters to a local paper.

CORRECTION

In the last issue of Surgite!, Pond Inlet was reported to have a population of 5,000. This should have read 500. The Arctic Research Institute was incorrectly identified as the Arctic Research Establishment. Surgite! apologizes for the errors.

JUBILEE '89 OUR BIRTHDAY, YOUR PARTY. OCTOBER 19-21

All alumni are invited to an entire weekend of hands-on events and entertainment specifically designed to heartily thank the Niagara Community for its support over 25 years. Get braced for the World Lip Sync Contest on Saturday night or contribute your own words at the Philosophical Debating Tent or Speakers' Corner. The "World of Science" will be packed with displays and exhibits organized by the Division of Mathematics and Sciences. Jubilee '89 is part of Brock's 25th Anniversary Celebration, and 3,000 to 4,000 people are expected to be on-campus daily. For info: call the Jubilee Hotline at 688-5550, ext. 3592. Chief organizer is Al Pedler.

25TH ANNIVERSARY HOMECOMING '89 NOVEMBER 3-5

Beginning Friday at 6 pm, Homecoming Weekend whirls into action with three days of events designed to exercise your mind, body, and contribute to social fitness. Brock is on the move and you'll have the opportunity to see changes on campus as well as meet old friends and network with new ones. Come "Home" to hear the National Arts Centre Orchestra at 8 pm or join friends for a Pub Night on Friday at 9 pm. On Saturday's roster is a Pancake Breakfast, the Nylons in concert, the College of Education graduate conference plus varsity alumni games and departmental receptions.

Homecoming '89 ends with the Alumni Association General Meeting on Sunday at 1:30 pm. Expect a more detailed mailing in the summer. For more information call Mike Somerville, Coordinator of Alumni Affairs, at 688-5550 ext. 3564.

ALUMNI PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

It's Brock's 25th Birthday and without a doubt Brock University is on the move. In this and other issues, you'll read about changes to the campus—a new Student Centre, Townhouses, and School of Business.

In the last year, the Ontario government announced approx. $13 million in grants to help Brock increase space for its 10,000 full and part-time students. There are new degree courses in applied linguistics, health studies, accounting, and Canadian Studies. As well, you'll often hear Brock professors used as experts on the radio and in newspapers.

Brock alumni number 18,000 strong. What happens to Brock now is as relevant as what happened when we were students. The value of our degree depends on sustaining and continuing improvement of Brock's reputation, scholarship and teaching.

In this Anniversary Year, I invite all alumni back for Homecoming '89, November 3 to 5. We have a strong stake in the next 25 years, and an important role to play in the University's future.

President
Brock University Alumni Association

Help us write our Mission Statement

In its 25 years, Brock University has grown from a very small liberal arts University to one of 10,000 full-and part-time students. As Brock University enters its second quarter-century, it is taking stock of itself and planning its future direction. The University has established a Planning Steering Committee (PSC) which has been charged with the task of generating a draft "mission statement" for the University. The Mission Statement is intended to state briefly the kind of university Brock sees itself as, the attributes which set us apart from other universities, and the goals we have as an institution over the next decade.

The PSC is consulting with all stakeholder groups, including alumni. Written briefs will be accepted from all alumni. Submissions should address the following questions:

1. What role, if any, should Brock play in the larger community?
2. What are our strengths? Weaknesses?
3. What kind of a university do we want to be in 10 years?
4. Any additional comments you may wish to add.

The deadline for receipt of submissions is July 14, 1989. Briefs should be sent to:
Mr. Pat Beard, Secretary of the University
Brock University
St. Catharines, Ontario
