In Defence of Responsible Bureaucrats

Kenneth Kernaghan

Have you hugged a bureaucrat today? You say that you prefer to bash bureaucrats rather than hug them? Well, you're certainly not alone! Canadians don't seem to have high regard for civil servants, many of whom are perceived as neither civil nor service-oriented. But is this perception an accurate one? The answer is no! The widespread negative view of civil servants is based largely on ignorance of their roles and responsibilities.

A major theme in my recent book on The Responsible Public Servant (co-authored with Professor John Langford of the U. of Victoria), is that being a responsible civil servant is a very difficult task indeed. Civil servants are often subjected to conflicting demands—from political superiors, legislators, pressure groups, journalists, and ordinary citizens. They have traditionally been advised that responsible bureaucrats should adhere to certain general rules—or commandments. These commandments include such advice as: Act in the public interest! Be politically neutral! Don't disclose confidential information! Protect the privacy of citizens and other civil servants! Provide efficient, effective and fair service to the public! Avoid conflicts of interest! Be accountable!

Several difficulties arise from such advice. It's not easily apparent to civil servants—or indeed to anyone else—precisely what these general rules mean. Exactly what does it mean to be accountable? Accountable to whom? For what? By what means? Even when the meaning of the rules is clear, there is disagreement as to whether the rules are appropriate. For example, there is much disagreement about the extent to which civil servants should be allowed to engage in dual employment—or moonlighting. Finally, the rules sometimes clash with one another. Civil servants cannot, for example, always be both accountable to political superiors and efficient in the expenditure of public funds. Self-appointed critics of the civil service need to learn about the political and financial constraints under which civil servants work and of the crucial service and regulatory functions they perform—at our request!

The constant criticism which civil servants have endured in recent years has been accompanied by severe cutbacks in government programs and personnel and by reduced promotion opportunities. These developments have adversely affected civil servants' motivation and morale. There is now a pressing need to revitalize the civil service. But this revitalization will not be achieved if politicians, the news media, and the public do not extend to civil servants the respect they deserve. Justifiable criticism of civil servants is essential; unjustifiable criticism is self-defeating. Is it reasonable to expect civil servants to serve well and loyally those who demean them? Unduly negative public attitudes not only harm the self-image of civil servants but also make it more difficult to recruit the best and the brightest people for government work.

Now is the time to talk about the enormous achievements of our public bureaucracies. Our civil service experts in agriculture, medicine, management, diplomacy and the environment are highly-respected around the world. Many of the allegations about public sector growth and inefficiency are based on ideological considerations, not on facts. The ignorance of many business people about the real world of public bureaucracy is staggering. Our federal, provincial and municipal civil services are among the finest in the world—and this fact deserves greater recognition.

The reputation of our civil services has been damaged by the bureaucrat-bashing carried on by politicians, especially during election campaigns. It is of course naive to berate politicians for their overriding interest in winning elections, but is it really necessary for them to ride to victory on the backs of bureaucrats? Surely this is not only unnecessary behaviour, but unworthy behaviour!

Fortunately, public enthusiasm for bureaucrat bashing seems to be diminishing. For example, recent opinion surveys indicate that the public's image of the civil service is gradually improving. One day, Canadians may have to find a new national pastime. It's about time!

Achiever's Image Breeds a Child's Success

Success! Ah, the time and energy that we devote to its pursuit! All the study time; all the time on task; all the long hours of planning. Are we our own masters? Or is the outcome of our efforts largely predetermined by some series of events for which we may be unaware?

In today's society there are few issues in which we all share a common feeling or belief. One area however, in which all parents are united in a bond of concern is in the feeling we share for our children. Nothing is more dominant in our thoughts than the secured safety of our young, the health and welfare of our young, and the ultimate success and happiness of our young.

While this wish for the success and happiness of those who are dearest to us is a heartfelt desire, we share too the feeling of helplessness in being unable to guarantee this state for our children. How do we provide for success for our children? What is happiness? What can we do as parents to ensure that our children will ultimately live happy and productive lives?

These questions are difficult if not impossible for most of us to address let alone to answer in satisfactory, concrete terms.

John Kearns

From countless research studies that have been conducted on the lives of top performing people in various walks of life, we do know that happy and successful people sales or in the medical profession, people who describe themselves as happy and successful have a feeling of being in control of the decisions that effect their lives. They share certain qualities and characteristics. Whether the studies have examined people in athletics or business, in have positive self-esteem. Positive self-esteem is not something that one is born with...it cannot be acquired.

Positive self-esteem is not something that one is born with...it cannot be acquired. Instead, self-esteem is developed.

Instead, self-esteem is developed. It begins on the day of our birth. Throughout our childhood, we have countless interactions with various people. Our parents and relatives, our coaches and teachers, and our friends all play an important role in helping us to develop our image of who we believe ourselves to be. Over time, we come to see ourselves as responsible, capable, valuable and loveable. Hopefully this is the outcome. Yet the truth is, that for many children the view that they develop for themselves is exactly the opposite. Too often children learn to believe that they are incapable of dealing with life's situations. They learn to believe that their value as a member in a class or a family is inconsequential...that they don't matter to those around them.

When a belief develops that one is incapable, irresponsible or invaluable, the individual who has this belief acts as if it were true. If a student believes that he cannot do mathematics, he will approach mathematics with a predetermined belief that he will not be successful. If a child believes that he cannot hit a ball in baseball, the predetermined belief interferes with that child being successful in hitting the ball. In fact, the limitations that we find in life are not so much a factor of what we are, but more importantly what we think we are not. Think about that for a minute...it is not what we are that holds us back, it is what we think we are not!

So as parents we must ask questions. "How can I ensure that my child will be successful?" "How can I ensure that my child will see the world as a place full of possibilities and challenges waiting to be conquered?" "How can I ensure that my child will see herself in a positive light?"

To draw upon a parallel incident from the animal world might serve as an example to help clarify this point. Circus trainers are often forced to deal with both mature and young elephants simultaneously. On one such occasion, a young boy was walking by and noticed that tied to a telephone pole were two elephants, a full grown female and a baby elephant approximately four months of age.

The boy noticed that the mother elephant was secured by only a small rope while tied to the same pole, heavy leg irons and a substantial chain held the baby elephant. The boy noticed, too, that the mother was typically quite passive. The baby was pulling on the chain, all the time trying to free itself from its restrictions.

The boy asked the trainer why the elephants were secured in the manner in which they were. The trainer answered that the mother elephant had learned over the years that no matter how hard she tried to become free, it was not to be. The baby elephant had not yet learned that it could not become free and so, was still fighting to free itself. That is why the rope would be a very simple matter, she believed that she could not. Irrespective of what the facts of the matter were, her belief in her inability to get free prevented her from making the attempt. And so it is with people.

It is the responsibility of coaches, teachers and parents to provide opportunities for children to routinely experience situations in which success is probable.

heavier leg iron was still required.

The paradox, of course is that, even though the physical size of the mother elephant had changed, and breaking free from the little Irrespective of the truth of the situation that we may find ourselves in, we respond to the situation based on our belief structure of our abilities or our inabilities. Our self-concept is a major controlling factor in our behaviour and determines to a large extent our success in life.

So to address the question of insurance on the part of parents...what can be said? Success breeds success...an old adage, yes, but so true none the less. Our inner drive to pursue new challenges, to address the future with a positive and optimistic set of expectations, is directly related to the success that we have previously experienced in similar situations. If we provide experiences for our children that are developmentally appropriate and within their ability range, the opportunity for them to experience success dramatically increases. With the increase in success comes a personal sense that is reflected in the belief held by the child that "I am responsible and capable of dealing with what is expected of me." It is the responsibility of coaches, teachers and parents to provide opportunities for children to routinely experience situations in which success is probable. By orchestrating programs and learning experiences where this can occur, we go a long way to ensuring that our children will develop positive self-images and positive expectations about themselves.

Capital Campaign Ushers in the 90's

"I've been involved with many campaigns," says Allan Orr, "but this is the first one I've enjoyed." The Chair of Brock's Board, together with Trustee Ken Fowler, led the recently completed drive to "Give Brock the Business," surpassing a $3.5 million goal to realize $4.8 million. In addition to completing the financing for the $8.5 million Taro Building, the campaign has financed the Burgoyne Centre for Entrepreneurship and provided the legacy of a 50 per cent increase in the University's endowment.

What bricks and mortar do you get for $8.5 million these days? The 42,000 square foot, three story Taro Building now under construction will house the Faculty of Business Studies and the Departments of Economics and Politics. More academic departments will benefit when existing space is vacated and renovated.

While the campaign took just 16 months from conception to the announcement of the final achievement, the Taro Building results from plans laid several years ago. The University was crowded. 'Intimate' was taking on a whole new meaning in the context of Brock's traditionally intimate classes. Indeed, Brock had just 77 per cent of the space that its enrollment justified. A new building was needed.

Taro partners with President White: Brock's first $1 million gift

Under its funding formula, the provincial government would contribute two-thirds of the capital cost of approved projects. Brock stated its case and won approval in the late spring of 1988. The plan for the new building specified seminar rooms, case study rooms, research labs, faculty offices, plus lounge areas for both students and professors.

This exciting vision came with the stubborn reality of a $3.5 million capital campaign. For Brock President Terry White, just arriving from the University of Alberta, it meant a quick initiation to the Ontario government and to a new University. "The campaign provided a useful learning experience for me in that I had to learn a lot about the University very quickly."

"I thought that the President should play a leadership role. I worked closely with (Executive Director, External Relations) Grant Dobson, who developed the campaign strategy and served as Campaign Director," recalls President White. "Mr. Dobson wanted the campaign to achieve a number of communication and development goals beyond the immediate monetary need. We wanted to run a successful campaign and leave in place a dedicated group of volunteers. We wanted a development plan that would boost annual fundraising. We surpassed these objectives and the icing on the cake is a $1.1 million increase in our endowment to do the things that are not possible through our operating budget."

Both President White and Grant Dobson were confident the $3.5 million target could be reached with careful planning and committed volunteer leadership. The committed leadership was provided by Messrs. Orr and Fowler who recruited the balance of the campaign organization. "I can't say enough about them," says President White. "Their enthusiasm and dedication were infectious. The volunteers captured that enthusiasm."

BY JANICE PASKEY

Mr. Orr says his most important role was bringing Ken Fowler on board. "He is very respected in the Niagara area. I saw myself as leading in the heavy industry area which I came from, and Ken working with the new players."

Both worked with Grant Dobson and President White to set up a campaign organization. "We spent a lot of time laying out the organization," Mr. Fowler said. "It had to be good or we risked losing the good people we wanted to recruit. We had the right need at the right time. Brock was showing a renewed commitment to the community with programs like the Burgoyne Centre for Entrepreneurship. Many of the best people in Niagara and beyond were happy to join us."

The plan was to solicit the fewest and largest donations possible. Soon the campaign team was assembled and a new donor relations policy made their job easier as it provided systematized recognition for donations. The donor relations policy gave donors the opportunity to participate in the project of their choice.

Chancellor Robert Welch took on the task of media relations and the campaign was divided into four sections: Foundations, Niagara (St. Catharines, Niagara Falls and Welland), National Corporations and Brock Faculty and Staff.

President White undertook many speaking engagements with community groups and at 25th Anniversary luncheons held throughout Niagara. "The ingredients were right," according to Terry White.

Allan Orr: the right people and the right project.

"First and foremost, Brock really is Niagara's University. There is a partnership between the community and Brock. We have thousands come to Brock Centre for the Arts each year and have a $100 million economic impact on the region, not to mention community use of our fine athletics, library and other facilities. The whole region became involved and there was strong momentum. I've found there's an enormous base of talent here and many of these people got behind the campaign enthusiastically. I now have a better appreciation of Niagara—it's a real go-getter type of community."

The campaign was also designed to develop the University's national base and make the corporate sector aware of the uniqueness of Brock. Recalls Terry White, "In stating a case before the corporate sector, which is people intensive. They were supportive of our cause and supported us generously. The campaign was important from a public relations and public information perspective."

Ken Fowler: the organization had to be good.

We had the right need at the right time. Brock was showing a renewed commitment to the community.

The word was out. Brock was embarking on a campaign, and an early major donation let the community know this campaign meant business — or "Give Brock the Business" as the signature for the campaign read.

Soon came the donation that set the pace and gave the campaign its momentum. On New Year's Eve of 1989, Ken Fowler and his Taro Properties Inc. partners Desmond Vaughan, Kerry Howe and Roy Cairns would donate $1 million, the largest gift ever made to Brock University. Under the University's donor relations policy and campaign designation opportunities, the new structure was renamed the Taro Building. The partners' reputation served to attract many new donors, their visions raised by the magnitude of the lead gift.

The $1 million instilled confidence in the volunteers and soon another major donation was announced. This time, $500,000 from the Burgoyne family who own the St. Catharines Standard. Their donation — marking the paper's 1991 Centennial — was allocated to fund The Burgoyne Centre for Entrepreneurship. Shortly after, faculty and staff led by Uwe Brand, Wendy Hollinshead, Bill LaHorey, Howard Prout and Jim Lennard netted $273,457 for the 25th Anniversary Scholarship campaign which included the building campaign. Donors continued to respond generously and in October, the final achievement of $4,817,555 was announced.

The University is in the enviable position of deciding how to allocate extra funds. Of the extra, $400,000 was designated by donors for eight endowed projects including named scholarships and a lecture series. The balance of $700,000, pledged over the next number of years, will be added to the University endowment as the Brock University Advancement Fund.

For President White, the successful campaign is a welcome achievement in his first years at Brock. As he puts it, "We played in the big leagues and we won."

Thomson Wins 3M Teaching Award

It was Clarke Thomson's turn to make the grade. The affable geography professor was selected from 36,000 university teachers for one of 10 3M Teaching Fellowships. This marks the first time a Brock professor has won the 3M award since it was offered in 1986.

"I'm flabbergasted," said Prof. Thomson, 62, upon hearing of the award, "It's an incredible honour." The award is given by 3M Canada Inc. and the Society for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education to recognize excellence in teaching of a professor's own courses and leadership and commitment to excellence in university teaching. Prof. Thomson was instrumental in beginning a committee on campus geared toward improving professors' teaching abilities. He is also the 1989 recipient of the Excellence in Teaching Award presented by the Brock University Alumni Association.

Prof. Thomson was flown to the Chateau Montebello by 3M Canada Inc.

for an exclusive three-day retreat and given a citation of teaching excellence. This is his 23rd year at Brock.

Rocky Named Best Canadian

He did it the Rocky way. Last October, Brock grad Rocky DiPietro, 33, set a Canadian Football League (CFL) record for the most passes caught in its history. In a game where his Hamilton Ti-Cats beat the Toronto Argonauts 45-14, DiPietro caught five Todd Dillion passes for a career total of 652—two more than Tommy Joe Coffey caught in 14 CFL seasons from 1959 to 1973.

Afterward, the 12-year veteran slotback told The Globe and Mail, "If I had it my way, this record thing would have stayed quiet," DiPietro said. "I'm not used to the limelight." No chance. He was subsequently named the Schenley outstanding Canadian in the league, and the Hamilton Ti-Cats went to the Grey Cup against the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

DiPietro's personal cheering section could be heard calling out "Rocky" over network television when he was announced in the Skydome. But his personal triumph was marred by a team defeat, and—some argued—uneven officiating. In what many are calling the most exciting game in Grey Cup history, the Cats lost 43-40 with Head Coach Al Bruno lambasting the referees.

DiPietro holds two Brock degrees: BPhEd '82 and BEd '83, and makes his home in St. Catharines with wife, Patty (née Stamps), BPhEd '82, BRLS '83, BEd '84, and their son, Joseph. (Patty was recently named to Brock's 25th Anniversary All-Star Women's Basketball team). In the spring, Rocky DiPietro has his own homecoming of sorts when he's back on Brock's campus for the Ti-Cat training camp.

No Love Lost On Western

Brock's continuing philosophical and cultural clash with the University of Western Ontario continued last fall with a parody newspaper bearing the unlikely headline, "Brock University and the University of Western Ontario to merge". Produced by alumnus Frank Reynolds (BA, '70), The Badger was out just in time for Homecoming. Upon hearing the news of the merge, President Terry White was quoted as saying: "Fantastic, we finally get a football team."

Then in real-life action Brock defeated the Western Mustangs 12-6 to win the Ontario University Field Hockey Championships. As Brock's student paper The Press tells it, "The Brock team was pumped up for the final. Western had defeated Brock the year before in the finals. This, and the fact that no one likes Western, was extra encouragement..." The Badgers were coached by grad Tim Sawicki (BPhEd '84) who is a lecturer in physical education at Brock. A parody shot of the Western team showed a dejected "Biff, Muffy, Chad, Ignatius, Cybil and Skippy".

Plates à la Soady

You are what you drive, or so the saying goes. But for Classics Professor Viki Soady, it's the license plates rather than the car which give a clue to the owner's passion: Rome, Rome, Rome! Her plates bear the acronym SPQR 31 (Senatus Populusque Romanus) or for those of us deficient in Latin: the Senate and the People of Rome. The 31 stands for the date of the Battle of Actum, an upbeat battle according to Prof. Soady.

"Rome is my favourite city in the world", claims the professor. Of the special order plates she says, "most people know it means something but I'm often asked if it's something dirty. Another person asked if the University Senate gave it to me because of my involvement with it."

Education History

Education professors Donald McAuley and Reginald Moase have produced a special book for the University's 25th Anniversary called "25 Years of Teacher Education at Brock University". The 116-page book with black and white photographs ($14.95 plus $1.75 shipping and handling) is available from Vanwell Publishing Ltd., P.O. Box 2131, Stn. B, St. Catharines, Ontario L2M 6P5.

You're Such a Card

The Brock University affinity card, a special credit card issued by the Bank of Montreal, is a many splendoured thing. The cardholder features are many, and each time you use it you are helping to fund the school near and dear to your heart. Over the next five years, projections suggest proceeds of $150,000, not to mention that the four-colour card is a great conversation piece. Many grads are reporting that storeowners and cashiers are stopping to ask questions about the card. So, in effect, it's putting the idea of Brock University into many heads...and wallets.

The response rate to the affinity card has been excellent. (On the back cover, you'll see an advertisement explaining why.) As of December 1st, 1077 alumni and students have received an affinity card, one of the highest participation rates among Canadian universities. Brock has recently received its first royalty cheque, which will be divided between the University's endowment fund (which provides scholarships, among other things) and the Brock University Alumni Association. Contact the Alumni Office at (416) 688-5550 ext. 3251 to receive an application form.

What's New With You?

Have you moved? Received a promotion? Changed career paths? Earned another degree? Married? Children? Please let us know so we can update our records. It's also a great way for you to let your fellow grads know what's happening in your life. Why not send a picture (preferably black & white)?
